THIS IS GONNA BE AN EPIC GOODBYE

Before we get down to serious biz, I just want to greet you all a hearty MERRY CHRISTMAS! It's that time of the year again when we get to create special memories with our friends and family (not to mention eat tons of food and splurge on toys). And speaking of special memories, it saddens me to say that my journey of creating kick-butt memories with KZ ends here. cue man tears

I know that it has only been a year of awesome adventures, but alas, I must bid you KZers farewell. Leading KZone has been nothing but amazing. It was a dream job that allowed me to harness my inner geek, be imaginative, and work with some of the coolest personalities this side of the planet. While with the magazine, I learned tons about dragon-slaying, preparing for the impending zombieapocalypse, dealing with aliens from outer space, and using my superpowers to fight pesky villains. But of all the knowledge and XP I gathered, what I found most special was being able to tell stories to kids like you. You see, each and every one of us has a unique story to tell—tales of bravery and courage, of new opportunities and challenges that must be conquered. And although I am closing another chapter of my life, one that has kept me as happy as a hungry Ninja Turtle with unlimited boxes of pepperoni pizza, I am also glad to be moving on. Where, you ask? Well, the kingdom that I am going to is one bursting at the seams with more dangerous missions. If it sounds like fun, that's because it is.

Don't worry! I'm leaving you all in capable hands. Ate Micah, your new KWEEN, is quite the adventurer herself. She's a former KZ staffer who has traveled the world, created mind-bending artwork, and is rumored to be a top secret agent working for a special troop of slick female spies (ask her about it when you get the chance). In order to be your new editor in chief, she had to swim through frog-infested swamps (ewwww!), sleep in a haunted house for a week (oh noes!), and beat an army of sneaky ninjas (kapow!). And I'm glad to say, she acted every last test we put her through.

To celebrate and welcome her into the team, we threw a sweetest neon-themed party, where we shook our butts to some crazy beats! We wish you all could've been there, because it was F-U-N! Now, I'm excited to see all the LOL-worthy memories you'll be creating with her and the rest of the KZ team. It's time for me to head off on another wild journey of my own! It's been real, yo!!!

PEACE OUT!

WE SENT OUT BRAVE REBELS TO SUSS OUT THE ULTIMATE WEAPON.

FLY ME TO THE MOON

A.K.A. DS-1 platform, the Death Star is a moon-sized battle station built by the eevvil Galactic Empire. This mega mecha ball's main wep is the Superlaser—a powerful blaster with a beam so strong, it can destroy an entire planet!

CORE STRENGTH

The DS-1 contains a hypermatter core reactor powered by eight massive Kyber Crystals. These crystals are also the main energy source of lightsabers.

DEFENSE TACTICS

The Superlaser takes 24 hours to juice up before it can be used again (and you thought recharging your power bank took so long!). The ridiculously lengthy charging time leaves the DS defenseless in case of an enemy ambush, which is why Deathtroopers, Stormtroopers, lasers, cannons, and tractor beams guard the station to protect its vulnerable surface.

CAUGHT IN THE MIDDLE

The Mid-hemisphere Trench is the thin valley that runs parallel to the DS's Equatorial Trench.

GALACTIC EMPIRE'S CHECK IT!

EYE IN THE SKY

A humongous lens called "The Eye" can be found on the Superlaser. Eight smaller lasers surround the lens and can be adjusted to point toward the target. Pew-pew-pew!

DYK? It takes 168 Imperial gunmen to operate the Superlaser, plus 14 gunmen for each minor laser.

THE GREAT DIVIDE

The Equatorial Trench is a huge ditch that runs across the DS and divides it in half. This wide valley is the location of many of the ship's main systems, such as landing bays and mooring towers for AT-ATs, TIE fighters, Star Destroyers, Starfighters, Strike cruisers, drive thrusters, and more.

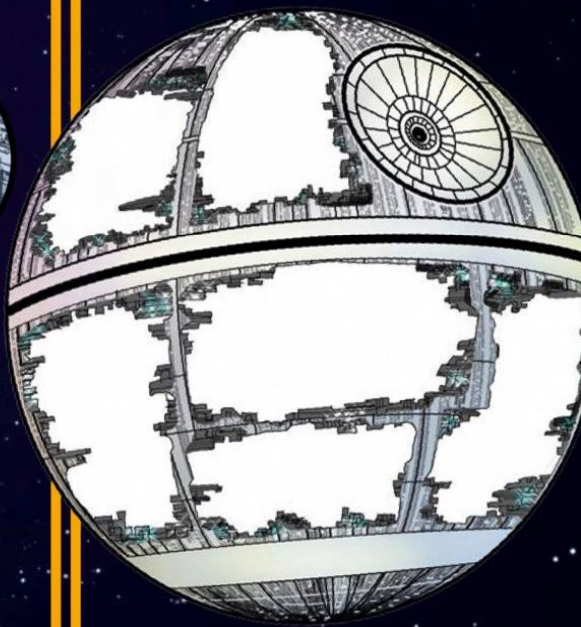

SURFACE TENSION

More than two million officers, droids, and military personnel are stationed on the Death Star, which houses different buildings, command centers, cantinas, and commissaries.

FRIGHT FEST

THE GREEF CHRISTMAS

'Tis the season for scaring!

Last year, around Christmastime, my parents asked my little brother Ricky what he wanted for Christmas. All he said was, "I want to befriend Santa's elves."

My brother has always been a loner. He was never a fan of sports, video games, or any of the other stuff boys his age liked.

Because he didn't have any playmates, Ricky got into the habit of drawing fantastical creatures. At first, I found his drawings amusing. But as the year went on, they got darker and darker.

One day, I remembered Ricky's wish from the previous year. "Hey, Ricky, do you still want friends?" I joked.

He just smiled and replied, "It's okay, Kuya. I'm already friends with Santa's elves. My wish came true."

It sounded ridiculous but I humored him. "What do your friends look like?" I asked. He took out his drawing pad and showed me his "friends." He had drawings of little gray-skinned creatures with

"Feed them what?" I asked.

"Don't tell mommy, but I give them raw meat from the freezer. They get angry when they're hungry, and sometimes they bite," he said.

Ricky pulled down his socks. He had scabs on his ankles. It looked like they were scratched. I got a little worried at this point. "They're nice, as long as their tummies are full," Ricky said. "They're scary when they're hungry."

"I don't think there should be elves in our house," I replied.

"I said that, too," Ricky said. "I asked them why they're here. They said they were here first and that we built our house on top of their home. We destroyed what was theirs. So now, they're going to destroy our house, too."

When we got home, I told Mom and Dad that Ricky has been seeing things, hallucinating. They promised to talk to him during Christmas dinner, but first they had to leave us at home while they went to shop for our presents.

After an hour or so of being home alone with my brother, I received a call from Mom and Dad. They asked me to wake Ricky up, because we were having our Christmas dinner with relatives.

I went up to Ricky's bedroom but I couldn't find him. I looked under his bed, in his closet, and even in his bathroom. He wasn't there. I was about to go back downstairs when I heard a noise coming from the cupboard under the sink.

I could hear plastic containers and cleaning tools falling over as if someone was crawling inside the cabinet. I was certain that it was Ricky playing a prank on me.

"Ricky?" I asked as I walked toward the noise. I heard a muffled voice, followed by a small growl.

I opened the cabinet and the first thing I saw was Ricky's face, full of fear, while a small gray hand clawed his cheek.

He was surrounded by these "elves," and they were trying to drag him into a dirt tunnel under the sink.

I pulled him out of the tunnel as small elves clung to him. Some of them jumped on me and started to bite. "They're hungry, Kuya!" Ricky screamed.

Dozens more gray monsters crawled out of the tunnel. They were about a foot tall and had lanky arms and legs, but each one was almost as strong as I was.

It was a struggle, but I was able to stand up. I grabbed Ricky's hand and said, "Run!" We sped out of the house as fast as we could. We started screaming, "Help! Help!"

Fortunately, the monsters didn't follow us out the door—probably because there was a crowd of our neighbors standing outside. They had come out to investigate the noise coming from our house.

"What's wrong?" they asked.

I pointed to our house.

All the lights in the house had gone out. We all saw it—there were hundreds of little red eyes gleaming in the darkness. They were in the windows, the garage, and the front door that was left open.

Then, it happened.

All the lights in the village went out. All the houses were dimly illuminated by the elves' eyes. There was nothing but darkness, red, smoldering eyes that glowed brighter, and menacing growls that grew louder all around us.

We were trapped.

glowing red eyes and sharp teeth. They were playing in his room, sitting on our couches in the living room, crawling up our walls, and hiding under my bed. "These elves don't look friendly, Ricky," I said.

"They are friendly, but only if I feed them," he explained.

OUT ON A LIMB

During the filming of SW: TFA last year, a hydraulic door on the Millennium Falcon set fell on actor Harrison Ford, A.K.A. Han Solo, and broke his leg. Fast-forward to October this year: Foodles Productions, the Disney subsidiary in charge of the set, has to pay a whopping $2 million (around 96 million pesos) for neglecting the health and safety of its employees! HOW TO DRAW

K-2SO

QUICK DRAW

STEP 1: THIS IS THE DROID YOU'RE LOOKING FOR

Lightly sketch K-2SO's form using a pencil. Draw a dome shape for the upper part of his head, a trapezoid for his jaw, and a bulb shape for the torso. Next, make cylinders for the arms and legs, ovals for the hands, and circles for the joints.

STEP 2: 'BOT BATTLE

Now draw K-2SO's head. Make two small circles on the eyeline for his eyes, then an L-shaped design on his left cheek. Add a smaller inverted "L" on his jawline. Next, draw his neck using squares and rectangles of varying sizes. Draw the collar last.

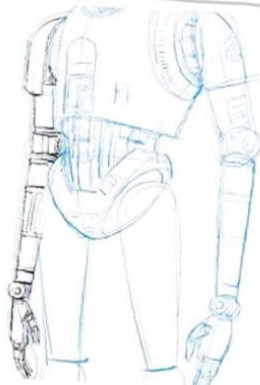

STEP 3: FRONT AND CENTER

Draw the droid's upper torso by making a semi-circle below his right shoulder. Draw parallel C shapes under his left shoulder, then put straight lines along the length of the semi-circles to add more detail. Finally, draw an elongated half-dome and rectangles on his chest plate.

STEP 4: LOW BLOW!

Draw the intricate designs and circuitry on K-2SO's waist using rectangles and straight lines. Next, draw a V shape below the waist for his pelvic joint.

STEP 5: MECH MY DAY

For K-2SO's arms, first draw the wires on the left shoulder joint, then make a shoulder plate and put a gear logo on it. Put bolt sockets on the elbow and wrist joints. Draw lines for the forearms and add the droid's mechanical fingers. Repeat the process for the right arm (minus the gear logo).

STEP 6: ALL SECURED

For the droid's limbs, start by drawing the thigh area and adding the line designs. Next, make lines down to the shin area to add more details. Then, add the bolt sockets on the knees and ankles, and draw a right triangle for K-2SO's right foot. Repeat the process for his other leg.

STEP 7: ROBO READY!

Trace over all your pencil marks with a pen. After the ink has completely dried, erase all your pencil marks. Now for the fun part—coloring! Kaytoo's eyes are white, his metal casing is black, his control panel is gray, and his shoulder joints are gold. Use different shades to add depth to your art. Now this droid is ready to battle the Galactic Empire!

CHRISTMAS STUCK-ING

HOW TO MAKE YOUR KZ PAPER POP TOY:

- 1 Cut along the thick black outlines of the toy pattern. Next, cut out the rectangular B and C holes on Evil K-LEB's TORSO.
- 2 Assemble the CHIMNEY BASE by following the broken lines and folding it into a box. Glue the white flaps together, then fold the bottom flaps inward.
- 3 Fold the ARMS along the broken lines. Then, create small slits along the orange lines.
- 4 Glue each ARM to itself using the white flap. Do not glue the B and C flaps.
- 5 Slip the ARMS into the arm holes on Evil K-LEB's TORSO. Glue the B and C flaps onto its walls.
- 6 Attach the TORSO's front red flap to the gray box of the CHIMNEY BASE. Fold the rest of Evil K-LEB's TORSO, but don't glue it yet.
- 7 Take the long A flaps from each arm and make valley folds along the broken lines. Next, glue the A flaps on top of each other on the A box of the CHIMNEY BASE.
- 8 Stick the remaining parts of the TORSO to the gray box of the CHIMNEY BASE. Then, glue the TORSO to itself. Lastly, attach the top of Evil K-LEB's head to his head flaps. Let's see Evil K-LEB try to get out of this sticky sitch!

A NEW HOPE

Beyond Good & Evil 2 is finally in the works! The news was confirmed thanks to some concept art revealed on BG&E's official Facebook page. The first game came out back in 2003 and follows the sci-fi adventures of photojournalist Jade and her uncle Pey—who happens to be a talking alien pig. We can't wait to see what the duo's up to in the sequel but in the meantime, you can check out the original game on Steam.

Push it two steps backward until it drops down to the floor. Then, go to the leftmost corner of the room where you'll find a box with a blinking right arrow on it. Push it a step to the right and four steps forward. Now, return to the entrance and push the final box a step to the right, six steps forward, and another step to the right. Finally, follow the coin trail, which leads up to the lever, and switch dat ball on!

How can I defeat the Elite Four in Pokémon Ruby?

In order to defeat the Elite Four, you must have at least level 55 Pokémon. Here's what you should bring: a Fighting-type Pokémon to counter Sidney's Dark-types and Glacia's Ice-types, a Dark-type like Mightyena to fight against Phoebe's Ghost-types, and an Ice-type 'mon such as Glalie and a Dragon-type like Flygon to go head-to-head against Drake's Dragon-types. And, for the final battle against Steven, bring a strong Fire-type to fight his Steel-types.

TIP TRIP

Benni Tiglao has some brick-tastic advice for all you LEGO Marvel Superheroes players.

In order to defeat the Sentinel, use Iron Man and a strong character like Thor or The Hulk. Look for the Sentinel in Columbus Circle and subdue it by using explosives, heat rays, and projectiles. You gotta aim at its chest so you can break its silver plate. Once you triumph over the baddie, it will explode and give you loads of studs.

READER REVIEW

Magus Gadi tells us why Megabyte Punch packs a lotta gaming punch!

GAMEPLAY

In Megabyte Punch, you get to build your own fighter robot. You brawl against other robots in order to break them and claim their parts. When you get their parts, you can equip them on your own 'bot to upgrade it and gain special powers.

GRAPHICS

The graphics in the game are 3D. You can see all the parts of your robot, down to the smallest bits. Seeing destroyed parts scattered all over the place after the battle is wicked cool!

REPLAY

The game has two modes: Adventure Mode and Fight Mode. In Adventure Mode, you go around different environments in search of parts and to battle other 'bots. In Fight Mode, you brawl with other players or AI to test out your mech's abilities.

SOUND

The music in the game's got a techno vibe. The sound changes when there's a boss battle and becomes more epic during combat. You'll hear rad explosions and wind blowing in the air! It's so realistic, it sounds like it's happening in your house!

OVERALL

If you like beat-'em-up games like Super Smash Bros, you'll be addicted to this game!

LIFE IS AN OCEAN OF EMBARRASSMENT!

My family and I attended a birthday party. There was a clown cracking hilarz jokes and I laughed so hard, I fell off my chair. The guests burst out laughing at my misfortune.

ADRIANNE CURAMENG

I was babysitting my younger cousins. Everything was peaceful until they started fighting over the same toy. I got in between them to stop them from hitting each other, only to get hit in the face with a toy hammer. Ouch!

SARAH LIM

I stepped on something sticky while I was walking around my village playing Pokémon Go. I thought it was just gum, so I walked on. When I checked my shoes after a while, I saw that it wasn't gum, it was poop. Ewww!

PAULA FRANCES

I felt the urge to pee, so I rushed to the bathroom. I flushed the toilet but it was broken and splashed water all over me instead. I went back to my classroom soaked, and my classmates chuckled because they thought I fell in the school pond.

MC EDWARD FIGUEROA

I was playing with my friends when I got a gassy feeling. Thinking it was nothing, I ignored it and moved closer to my buds—and then I let out a huuuuge fart. Oops!

MIGUEL GONZALES

I rode a jeep on the way home. When I sat down, I grabbed some coins, handed them to the driver, and said, "Pabill po." Hehe, whoops!
